ACTION DOGS

The 2008 Action Dog Trials was a very well run week that was well attended by the crowds. The competitors demonstrated high dog handling skills under very difficult conditions. Most trials are held on open spaces such as the local oval or maybe on school grounds, so that the noise, crowds, smells, farm animals and atmosphere of excitement at the show was a new experience for the dogs that caused much distraction. It was too much for a few dogs, as they could not resist the temptation to investigate the new environment or the chance to run into the crowd for a free pat. The normal trial ring is 45 metres by 15 metres so operating in a 30 metre square was yet another item to add to the distractions. However, there were many dogs that did cope very well with the conditions and did demonstrate their ability to perform the set exercises.

In the Obedience Trials, there were no passes at the top two levels of Utility Excellent and Utility. It was clear that the dogs were capable of the work, but unfortunately there were one or two things that went wrong that caused a non qualifying score. The exercises at the top level require the dog to concentrate on their work for ten to fifteen minutes and during this time one miscommunication between the dog and the handler will result in a non qualification. The difficult conditions definitely contributed to the non qualifications.

The Open Class produced some excellent work with the eventual best in trial coming from this class. As dogs from the higher classes are allowed to compete in the Open class, they were much more comfortable with the exercises at this level and were less susceptible to the distractions.

The Novice and Community Companion Dog classes are the first two levels that competitors enter, so the dogs (and handlers) are inexperienced. We did get several passes at these levels although there were a few dogs that were overwhelmed by the excitement of the day.

The Agility and Jumpers Trials are always a big draw card for spectators, and it was not surprising to see the big crowds there all day. There are four classes with increasing degree of difficulty, so at the Masters level the dogs are performing complex courses at high speed. The handler is required to guide the dog through the course, which means the handlers have to move quickly and sometimes control their dog from some distance. It is this activity that makes the sport such an exciting spectator sport. The top dogs demonstrated the high degree of team work required, with the dog taking direction from the handler in less than a second while running between jumps, and made it look easy in the process.

The Agility Games Trials were also a great crowd pleaser. The Games were originally instigated as a training methodology to improve handler skills but they have developed into a sport of their own. In games, the handler decides the course they will take to achieve their objective, so it becomes unpredictable as to where they will go and which obstacle they will take. This unpredictability adds much to the excitement and entertainment for the crowd while making it hard for the judge to keep in the right position to assess the performance without getting in the way of the dog or handler.

In Gamblers, the handler must pick a course which will gain them at least the minimum points and then complete the Gamble part of the course which is a series of obstacles that must be completed while the handler stays behind a Gamble line, thereby forcing the handler to control the dog from a distance.

Snooker rules are similar to the pool table game, where obstacles are identified as a 'Red' or a 'Colour'. The sequence is Red, Colour, until all the reds have been done, then the colours are done in ascending order. The objective being to increase the handler's strategy planning skills.

Strategic Pairs requires two dogs to complete a course that is somewhat disjointed, so the two handlers will have a plan on who will do what. If a dog faults an obstacle the other dog has to perform that obstacle which destroys the original plan. Strategic Pairs develops handler's contingency planning skills and improves their reactions when things go wrong.

As in the Agility, the Games Masters produced some brilliant performances that demonstrate the high degree of bonding between the dog and the handler. The Action Dog sports all require the dogs to be a willing participant. One of the most important facets of the sports is the enjoyment that the dogs show during their turn in the ring and this adds significantly to the spectator entertainment.

The importance of the Royal Show can not be underestimated as it is the best opportunity we have to show case our sport to the general public. The promotional advantage of showing just what a dog can do, and how much the dog enjoys doing it, can not be understated. There would have been many people that realise that their dogs are capable of participating, especially when a dog succumbs to temptation and disappears into the crowd for a pat. It demonstrates that the dogs are just ordinary dogs.

There will always be a compromise between having ideal competition conditions and still allowing large numbers of spectators. Crowd control outside the ring is important, to ensure there are minimal distractions, and it is also important to keep the ring clean from food, dog smells and pollution. If possible we should ensure that when the Action dogs are not performing, the rings are not used as dog exercise areas, and that show patrons do not use the area as a picnic ground.

Overall, I found the 2008 Royal Action Dogs to be very well organised and operated trials. Any problems were quickly solved, there was the minimum of waiting time between classes and the whole week ran smoothly. Congratulations to Clive, Estelle and the Action Dog Committee.
